

Hokowhitu Lagoon 7 April 2016

Thanks to the select group who turned up to explore the Hokowhitu Lagoon area, on the first event after daylight savings.

The checkpoints covered a smaller area than the week before, with a couple of distant ones for the keener people.

There were some great results, with three people collecting all the controls; some had their first go at orienteering and will hopefully be back next week.

Interesting answers for control 26, the number of red carvings in the garden. The four fastest people were obviously going too fast and counted wrong; the other five people all got it right! I gave points to everyone coz it was a bit hard (some of the statues were below the height of the bushes!)

The weather was overcast, with rain threatening, but it never eventuated. However the lower light levels after 6pm created a few challenges.

Next week, a reminder that it is helpful if you can bring the right change and also if you can bring your own pen (and a torch!).

Hope to see you there.

Yvette
